Blacken Her Sweetheart's Memory or Convict Her Avenging Father? CRUELEST PROBLEM GIRL EVER FACED

ELIZABETH LOVING, AROUND WHOM VIRGINIA TRAGEDY CENTRES.

LIVINGSTON, Va., June 7.—Round beautiful Elizabeth Loving, a girl in a situation seldom put by fate on a Virginian girl. She is free to face with the agonizing question, "Shall I clear my sweetheart's memory and convict my father?"

A change of years has given former Judge Loving who shot and killed Thomas Egan, the sweetheart of his daughter Elizabeth, and he will be placed on trial in Johnston Jail, on June 24.

The principal witness in the case is the young woman, who is regarded as one of the most beautiful and cultured young women in this section of the state. Miss Elizabeth Loving lives a terrible ordeal. Who called to the witness stand she must either give testimony that will send her father to a Virginia jail, or blacken the memory of her sweetheart whom her father shot to death, when he heard that Egan had dragged her.

Drugged Out Girls?

Since the shooting, the sensational fact has been brought out that in addition to the treatment of Miss Loving, Egan had been drugged two other highly respected young women of the community. The shooting of the young man by the highest respect of the community, that will send her father to a Virginia jail, or blacken the memory of her sweetheart whom her father shot to death, when he heard that Egan had dragged her.

When the case comes to trial we are told to discuss two cases of the same kind—two instances of young women well known here, who were similarly drugged by Egan and who left their father for four long years. Egan is now in the hands of the law.

Loving, who is the personal representative of the late Thomas Egan of New York, has no apparent fear of the outcome of the case. He has ample vindication in the eyes of the law.

Miss Loving, the daughter, is one of the most beautiful girls of the South. She has been found through the region for her beauty and her charming manner.

"Jack" Lee has Defense.

"Jack" Lee, the Lynchburg lawyer who successfully defended the Brother Louder at his trial for murdering the man who dragged her, is in charge of the defense. He is a fighter, especially where the "written law" is involved.

STOYPIN, DUMA EXECUTORS PUZZLED BY ENEMY, FORCED COTTON'S GIFT FOR WOMEN TO ADVOCATE

Find Difficulty in Carrying Out Ideas for School to Help Them Earn Living.

LONDON, June 7.—Pavel Stoypin, pioneer of Russia, has been placed in the position of a man of straw, in making it possible for women to support themselves, by paying the executors, William Cotton of Brooklyn and Walter B. Grant of Boston.

The will provides that they are "to form a school or institution or other trust for the purpose of enabling women and girls, especially of the poor or of the middle classes, without regard to nationality, religion or color, and to provide for those who are resident in Boston and vicinity, to improve or better their condition by being instructed in the performance of such work as housework, sewing, trade or business, suitable for women and girls, and to teach them the ordinary and the special duties of the home."

The executors are given twenty years from the date of the death of Mr. Cotton to carry out the will. They are to make a study of the situation in the United States, and they are to make a plan for the execution of the will as soon as possible.

Here to carry out the provisions of the will of Frank Cotton of Brooklyn is the task of an executors. It is to make it possible for women to support themselves, by paying the executors, William Cotton of Brooklyn and Walter B. Grant of Boston.

AERONAUT IN DEATH PERIL AFTER FLIGHT

Lincoln Beachey, Rescued from Waters of Revere Bay,
Happy in Success.

HIS AIRSHIP IS UNINJURED

After winning for himself the distinction of being the first sky pilot to soar over the skyscrapers of Boston and cross the globe since the late Massachusetts State House, Lincoln Beachey, the glider pilot from California, nearly lost his life when he sought to terminate his long flight.

Today he is receiving the congratulations of the world and counting with the gratification of his friends that he was rescued from the waters of Revere Bay yesterday. He has been satisfied with his extraordinary success in the cloud voyage of yesterday. Had it not been for the anxious watch of the Waverland Park employees and Beachey's own associates, the intrepid young aeronaut might have been drowned when his great dirigible ship plunged toward the waters of Revere Bay when an accident happened to the motor that propelled the dirigible.

Might Have Drowned.

Beachey came to Boston to do an engagement at Waverland park, the amusement resort at Revere Beach. He has already given several exhibitions of his wonderful machine there. Unhindered and unassisted, he started from the park yesterday at 12:45 o'clock.

"I think I'll take a little fly up to see what's going on," said Beachey, as he climbed aboard the frail sphere that constituted the body of the airship. He took to a considerable height and noticed the "sum" of the ship for Boston. He made the "sum" from Waverland to the State House in 27 minutes. The distance is seven miles. A sharp breeze during the flight, which was about the time for Governor Gould and Mayor Fitzgerald. Then the dirigible went over toward the Common and suddenly angled down and rested for several minutes on the parade ground.

50,000 Saw Flight.

By this time fully 50,000 people had assembled and the young aeronaut, who is only twenty years old, was given a rousing reception. He soon climbed aboard his ship again and with a wizard touch to the controls, soared up above the home-tops again.

DEFYING DEATH TO MAKE A SNAPSHOT OF AIRSHIP IN SKY

By Richard W. Sears,
Staff Photographer for Boston
American

As I heard the City Editor yell, "Sears, Sears—airship—Common—five minutes," I grabbed my camera and rushed. Three reporters and a kid to whom I gave one of my best shots, were up to the Common and new Beachey's airship there. As I started to the situation I saw that I would have to be elevated to get a good picture. I looked around for a good place. I saw the other photographers all at once and I didn't look good to me from that view. I looked around for my telegraph pole, as usual. I found one. With the reporters giving me a hand, I climbed. At the top of the pole I got my picture of the airship and of the crowd on the Common.

Picture at Any Cost.

Many friends down below, who had previously seen snapshots of telegraph poles and high buildings, laughed at me and called me about my lofty perch. Of course, I brushed up my camera, getting up and down the telegraph pole, but I didn't make a single snap until I was in a good position.

After coming down the pole I worked my way through the surging crowd to the airship. I met Beachey, who told me his brother had gone to the Governor's office and would be right back. He told me his brother was going to give me time to get up to the house and then I could go up to the big building. I got up to the top of the pole and decided the spot below the dome, which greeted me with a smile. I had been to the hotel frequently before after getting up to the top of the pole. I had been to the hotel frequently before after getting up to the top of the pole. I had been to the hotel frequently before after getting up to the top of the pole.

Stood on Roof Coping.

I stood on the roof coping, ten stories above the sidewalk. I could see the airship arising from the trees in the Common.

and heading toward the State House. It was a splendid sight.

Starting toward the Park Street Church, and ending above the State House, the airship sailed around Beacon Hill and headed toward the State House. It took one picture as it hung over the Common, changed my place and just snapped Beachey and his aerial vehicle as he swept about to enfilade the city dome.

I would like to have shown more of the State House, but I was on the edge of the coping ten stories up in the air, exposed to a strong wind and with very little time to do my work at that. The last view I saw of the airship, I found it was about a quarter of seven, to ground time. I saw it about a quarter of seven, to ground time. I saw it about a quarter of seven, to ground time. I saw it about a quarter of seven, to ground time.

I watched the airship disappear toward the horizon, wondering if I would ever get a chance to see it again. I saw it about a quarter of seven, to ground time. I saw it about a quarter of seven, to ground time. I saw it about a quarter of seven, to ground time.

That is one of my photographic ambitions.

COHAN IS NOW FREE TO MARRY BEFORE ARREST

NEW YORK, June 7.—Mrs. Grace Ethel Cohan, the wife of George M. Cohan, actor and playwright, has been granted her first divorce by Judge Victor J. Dowling in the Supreme Court. Her interlocutory decree has been heard March 1, allowed by Justice Cohan, who is known on the stage as "The Great Gatsby," and is awarded the custody of their six-year-old son, George M. Cohan, Jr.

Mr. Cohan, it is understood, will remarry at once.

NEW YORK, June 7.—August Dobin, 74, fourteen years a trusted employee of S. R. Hays & Bros., furniture dealers, was arrested today charged with stealing between $25,000 and $30,000 from the firm and the delivery of the same to a woman who, it is alleged, is a companion of his. He was arrested after he had attempted to kill himself with a pistol, and who was locked in a cell in police headquarters to await trial. He is expected to be released in a few days.

PROMISE AND FULFILMENT!

MY promise to the public of Boston—the policy I defined in my first announcement in the press of this city—I have lived up to faithfully.

1. You have been able to come into my store and select woolsens sold everywhere for $20, $25 and $30 at a price about one-third as much.

2. I have taken great pains to satisfy, and I firmly believe I have satisfied every man who has entrusted to me his patronage.

Today, in the third week of my great sale of the Glasgow Woollen Mills cloth, I want to call your attention to the great opportunity I am giving you to buy clothes cheaply. I have not waited till midsummer to cut prices, but have sold and am now selling at a time when other tailors still ask a fancy figure.

There will have to be some signs of life at the Huntington Avenue grounds this afternoon if the Hot Spiders expect to stem the Tigers in the last game of the series.

It will take some tall unbalancing to still Jennings' Tiger who will come out and swing to cut up the diamond dirt which the Florida club relies on.

It takes a good pitcher to stem the Westlanders in their wild swinging. The top score and that is where the Hot Spiders are a little off in their form. It is no reason to believe that the rest of the lineup of slugs are to show the same symptoms, and there is still a good chance of pulling the winter over.

Another loss will put the Tigers to near the bottom of the ladder for one more, and there is a hard call on the manager, when the Sox show up for a few more, and which will demand the enthusiasm, and nothing short of a sale little over the Tigers will put the fans in working order to give the right support against Lajoie's land.

The contest today is the third and the odd one to be played for. It will be the last game of the series to help out their total of losses, as there have been a time when they were more solid. It will be a fast game after the style of the greatest diamond batters in the world.

Now that the veteran warriors have had their try and been doled down, Manager

SCHRECK TO MEET JOHNSON OR SQUIRES LABOR DAY

CINCINNATI, June 7.—Mike Schreck is to be congratulated on his courage in accepting a fight with Jack Johnson. He is the only white man, save Max Baer, who has shown a willingness to meet the colored champion. Even though Schreck is to knock up with the black man, he is not a coward. He is a fighter.

Mike is Willing.

Schreck is a different matter. He is willing to fight all his weight in the heavyweight championship, or even to fight for a million dollars. He is a fighter.

SELEE, HANSON AND CLARKE SUCCESSFUL DEVELOPING BASEBALL STARS

NEW YORK, June 7.—By no means the smallest part of the work of men whose business it is to produce successful baseball teams, though it does not show on the surface as much as other duties, is to get the material.

Chicago Frank Chance was taken from behind the wheel and made room for the first baseman, a speedy player.

under Hanson, and Bettis and Brodie were the backstops last night. The game was a close one, with Hanson and Bettis and Brodie.

Dreyfus Finds a Few.

It is really a wonderful list of players that have been brought out under the Dreyfus name.

John Morley was really a Hanlon product. Joe Kelley did his best work under Hanlon, and Bettis and Brodie were the backstops last night.

PAPKE WINS BY KNOCKING OUT AFTER SEVEN

PHOENIX, Ariz., June 7.—Bill Papke of Spring Valley was a characteristic fighter last night in the seventh round, when he knocked out Morgan of Indianapolis with a right to the jaw, after having been hit out by Morgan's left.

McGowan fought Papke at long range labeled some terrible punches on the cow. McGowan was hit by Papke's right hand, which was a good one.

A review by WILLIAM ARCHER, the famous critic of the London Leader.

I have lately been reading with something very like amazement

I have lately been reading with something very like amazement a book entitled "Editorials from the Heart: Newspapers." I took it up expecting to find it a satirical exposure of the doctrines promulgated by the Yellow Press of America; and, behold it contains a series of religious and social essays, the former of which might quite well have emanated from the City Temple and the latter from the Fabian Society. It is, in short, despite its somewhat "snappy" journalistic manner, a work of high enlightenment; and I only hope the millions to whom it is so much taken that these homilies reach the editors of our daily. The one to whom I particularly refer is—rather embarrassingly headed "The Elephant that will not move" has better excuses than we have for folly displayed—and this is the Elephant's story:

In the Zoological Gardens of New York a poor elephant has stood in chains for years. The animal was thought to be vicious, and was kept fastened tightly to one spot, that it might have no leeway to do damage.

A short time ago its keeper became convinced that the elephant would do no harm, and might safely be unchained. The chains were taken off, and the keeper thought with satisfaction that the poor beast would now enjoy freedom and be made happy by the possibility of moving freely about its large enclosure.

The elephant did not move. The chains were gone, it was no longer tied, but it stood, and it still stands, in just the same spot.

The habit of slavery, of monotony, had become too strong. The elephant, though free, stands still, sadly swaying its heavy head, ignorant of the freedom that has come to it.

So for the parable: let us now hear the writer's application of it:

Millions of us, tied down by foolish superstition, are like that elephant—the chains are off, but we stand still.

The road to peace, happiness and universal progress has been shown us in the teachings of great leaders, but we still stand in the same old place, fighting, hating, cheating, suspecting, harming one another. * *

Look into your own mind. Do you take advantage of all the possibilities that are before you? Do you use your brain to control your existence, acts and habits for your own benefit and the benefit of others? If not, you ought to sympathize with this poor elephant.

Perhaps the analogy between Ibsen's fable of the sculptor and the "yellow" moralist's apologue of the elephant may not be at once apparent. But they are in reality the same, except that the poet is thinking mainly of the individual life, the journalist of the social life.

(The book reviewed, "Editorials from the Hearst Newspapers," contains about a hundred selected editorials printed in the Hearst papers during the past ten years. The book may be obtained from newscasters, who can order it, or it will be sent postage paid by the publisher, The Albion Publishing Company, Post Office Box 20, New York City, on receipt of one dollar.)

How About THE FIVE?

Of Course It's a Shame—BUT IF YOU HATE THE
FIFTY THOUSAND,
How About THE FIVE?

It IS distressing, that in our industrial life there should be possibility of strikes, of serious industrial warfare. It is a great shame that workmen, fifty thousand or more, should, in the effort to get their rights, or what they conceive to be their rights, interfere with the welfare, the comfort and the business of millions. Certainly the world ought to be organized better than that. The life and the necessities of millions should be at the mercy of no individual and of no CLASS of individuals.

And the time will come when it will not be possible for one man, or for fifty thousand men, to control the necessities, the mental and the industrial peace of tens of millions.

But we can tell the Journal of Commerce something that is ten thousand times more shameful, and that is the fact THAT FIVE MEN, NOT FIFTY THOUSAND, can do more to hurt industry than fifty thousand or five million.

It is a disgrace that FIFTY THOUSAND men actually working for wages should have power to stop the railroads, HOW MUCH MORE OF A DISGRACE IS IT THAT FIVE INDIVIDUAL MEN, THE FIVE MEN THAT OWN AND CONTROL THE RAILROADS OF THE UNITED STATES, should have not only the power to control all those railroads but all the citizens of the United States, and all the millions of men that work for the railroads?

Is it not shameful that a HALF DOZEN men, from motives of greed, should be able to keep honest business men from making a living, AND HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF HONEST WORKINGMEN FROM GETTING DECENT PAY?

It IS disgraceful and wrong that a life necessity for all human beings should be jeopardized by the quarrels, right or wrong, of any number of workmen.

But it is a thousand times worse that a handful of men, less than half a dozen, should be able year in and year out to control the welfare of all citizens, of all merchants and manufacturers, and of all railroad workers.

And we beg to tell the New York Journal of Commerce and all others interested, that as long as they can endure the spectacle of five men absolutely controlling all the railroads of the country, THEIR FELLOW CITIZENS CAN ENDURE THE IDEA THAT FIFTY THOUSAND WORKINGMEN SHOULD HAVE SOMETHING TO SAY ABOUT THE MATTERS THAT AFFECT THEM.

Fortunate it is for this country that the fifty thousand, and the five hundred thousand workmen do unite for their own defence.

This country would be very badly off, and the panic so much talked about would be constantly with us, if it were not for the fact THAT ORGANIZED WORKINGMEN COMPEL A DISTRIBUTION OF AT LEAST PART OF THE ENORMOUS WEALTH THAT THE CORPORATIONS GET INTO THEIR HANDS.

Without the organization of the workers, and their demand for some part of the money they produce, THERE WOULD BE IN THIS COUNTRY SUCH AN ACCUMULATION OF CAPITAL IN INDIVIDUAL HANDS AS WOULD MEAN HARD TIMES AND MOST DREADEFUL PANICS. National prosperity depends on distribution of wealth, and good wages mean cash distributed among the people.

If the time don't suit you, suit yourself to the time.—DUTCH

The paper under the public censure that the Irish is "not a newspaper."

The Midford News, the latest addition to the aggregation of hurt birds, is in a similar position. It has length, undertaken to justify its publication, by advertising in the Irish a "pure editorial-like advertising by which the advertiser is connected therewith, without any other consideration."

The Midford Daily News are satisfied with this explanation. They are not to be asked to advertise a "pure reading matter" comment upon their intelligence in

[illegible]

By James J. Montague

HERE are the little boy's thoughts to-night as he watches the far-off sky?
What does he read in the glittering stars that wink when the clouds

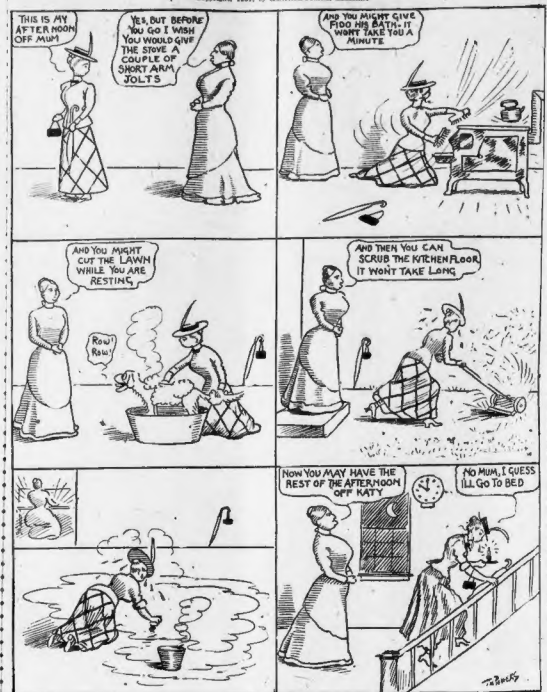

Is he dreaming of a fairyland that only a child can know—
A wonderful country where you and I have never a hope to go?
What is the wish in his little heart that he breathes in that tender sigh?

Listen to what he is whispering now: "Gee! but I'd like some pie!"

WHAT is the trouble, my little girl, that your heart may not forget? What is the stain on your rosy cheek; why are your lashes wet? Ah! childhood's sorrows! can grow-up folk divine them, or understand The woes that harrow the opening souls just starting from Babyland? Some grief as deep as the griefs we know must rest on that curly head! What does the sob from her breaking heart? "I WILL NOT go to bed!"

ANTOINETTE—Not very busy. I'm only spreading this tablecloth out in the sun to dry. Mamma says fine linen like this should always be spread on the grass to dry instead of being hung on a line.

2. HARRY—What a beautiful woman your mother is! She must have been very much like you at your age. And I'm sure you are going to be just as good a housekeeper as she is.

ANTOINETTE—Well, I'm doing my best to learn. I think every girl should learn to do housework.

3. ANTOINETTE—Mercy! See what he's done! He's tracked all over the tablecloth with his muddy feet.

4. HARRY—Don't cry, Antoinette. I'm sure your mother won't blame you when I tell her it was all my fault.

ANTOINETTE—I'm not crying about the old intellect! It's the brutal way you treated poor Nero that hurts me. No gentleman would kick a poor innocent dumb beast like that. Boo.
